

Learning from the 'Waist Up'

I had the good fortune to meet with a couple of people who are passionate about creating change in the education system. They put me onto a TED talk given by Sir Ken Robinson.

This is a beautiful and funny presentation about something that is fundamental to our ability to develop collaborative intelligence. If you haven't watched it yet – sit back and switch the phone off for 20 minutes. Tip: You will have to watch most of it to discover what Ken means by 'learning from the waist up'.