

Collaborative Intelligence: Tools of the Trade

I've just tripped over a great little tool – Jing – it's made by the same people that make Camtasia. Collaborating with information can be a challenge sometimes – a tool that enables you to capture all or part of your computer screen can be very handy. This little tool also enable you to capture videos of what you do on your screen. This is great if you need to show a colleague how to do something from a distance.

Here is the link to the file – <http://screencast.com/t/QZtWrvVrZ> (WordPress doesn't want to make this a live URL for some reason but don't let that put you off) stored on the screencast server – you can send anyone thin link – just as I have included a link to a screen shot here. The only limitation I see is that you can't store the files on your own PC.